Accessibly written and painstakingly researched, this study reconstructs the life and splendor of Abd-ar-Rahman III, who ruled as emir from 912 to 929 AD and then, departing from the tradition of his ancestors by anointing himself caliph, as the leader of the Islamic world until 961 AD. From the Medina Azahara, his palatial city near Cordoba, and North Africa to the western Mediterranean and the central lands of Islam, this book charts the extent of Abd-ar-Rahman III's territorial and military conquests and describes his extravagant lifestyle, taking into account the political and religious context of the 10th century.
