Not illustrated. 1894 Excerpt: ...in Sutton's case, I'lj where the instrument was capable of making the sceptre only, cannot now occur. On an indictment for making a mould intended to make and impress the figure and apparent resemblance of the obverse side of a shilling, it was held (1) R v. Lennard, I I.each 85. (2) R v. Sutton, I Sir. 1074. sufficient to prove that the prisoner made the mould and a part of the impression, though he had not completed the entire impression. (I) It is unnecessary, under this article, to prove the intent of tho defendant, the mere similitude being treated as evidence of the intent. Neither is it essential to shew that money was actually made with the instrument in question, (t) In Ridgeley's case the prisoner, was indicted for having in his possession, without lawful authority, etc., a puncheon made of iron and steel, in and upon which was made and impressed the figure, resemblance, and similitude of the head side of a shilling. It was proved that several puncheons were found in the prisoner's lodgings, together with a quantity of counterfeit money, and that he had them knowingly for the purpose of coining. These puncheons were complete and hardened, ready for use: but it was impossible to say that the shillings which were found were actually made with these puncheons, the impressions being too faint to he exactly compared; but they had the appearance of having been made with them. The manner of making the puncheons was as follows. A true shilling was cut away to the outline of the head; that outline was then Hxed on a piece of steel, which was tiled and cut close to the outline, and this made the puncheon; the puncheon then made the die, or counterpuncheon. A puncheon is complete without letters, but it may be made with letters upon it: though, from the diff...
